Letting summer go

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

As much as it pains me to say it, summer is nearly over. Some people are OK with this. Some are not. Those folks seem to have a hard time letting it go and welcoming autumn.

With that in mind, here are 10 ways to get over summer:

1. Visualize that fat guy wearing the little Speedo.
2. Take a walk along the edge of a wetland area and commune with the mosquitoes.
3. Remember, once the leaves fall, you'll actually be able to see which tree your kite is hanging in.
4. Think about it: the snow tires you never removed from your truck don't look so awkward now.
5. When someone says they had the best corn ever, at least you know they're not about to describe a foot ailment.
6. Two words: no Crocs.
7. You can now pretend you have a tattoo, if anyone asks.
8. No more spontaneous watermelon seed spitting contests.
9. Remember: kale is no longer in season.
10. Traffic jams are back to being defined as anything more than three cars at a stop sign.

Run supports vision of Terry Fox

By Darren Lum

After 36 years, Terry Fox's legacy in this country is as strong as ever.

His heroism continues to motivate and inspire Canadians such as the Haliburton run co-ordinator Jennifer Button, a local paramedic with a passion for running.

She invites the public to join her in the Haliburton's Terry Fox Run on Sunday, Sept. 18, which combines her two passions.

"In one sense we're remembering Terry Fox. We're raising money for the Terry Fox Foundation, which supports ... cancer research for all sorts of cancers and it gets people out running. It's a non-competitive, friendly event. It's not timed. It doesn't matter how fast or how slow you are," she said.

At 33, she wasn't even born when Fox captured the imagination of a nation with his Marathon of Hope, the effort to run across Canada and raise $1 for every Canadian for cancer research. She learned about his incredible achievement of motivating the country to walk or run in his memory when she was in school.

The second-year co-ordinator said she doesn't have a particular monetary goal this year because the important thing is to keep the event alive and draw more participants than the 98 who came last year.

"The goal is to just keep this going and keep this money flowing in. It doesn't have to necessarily be bigger and more money every year, but keep this going and get as many people out. We want to see more people out. That's what we want to see," she said.

Although there isn't a specific fundraising goal, Button said she would like to raise a $1 for every person in the town, which is similar to the challenge Fox asked to raise $1 for every Canadian back in 1980. Last year the local event raised $5,200.

"I work as a paramedic in town and seeing day to day the people affected by cancer really [makes] the Terry Fox Foundation a priority as far as charitable organizations in my mind," she said.

Like last year, the event will include the Haliburton Highlanders Pipes and Drums, who will be serenading runners as they tackle the hill at the halfway feed station on Museum Road.

Button said she asked the band to join the event after the rush she had when she heard live music in the Nike Women's 15K running event on Centre Island in Toronto, which helped to spur her on to the finish line.

Another returning feature will be the "high-five station" at the halfway point for the children's run. However, instead of the Haliburton Wolves players, it will include OPP auxiliary officers.

Button said seeing photos of the children with beaming smiles while receiving high-fives was "awesome."

"Every single one of them. Even the kids that were shy at the beginning of the run, who weren't too sure about it, every kid coming through had a big grin on their face high-fiving them," she said.

All the children get a ribbon. There is not a minimum age to participate in the run.

Button points out this event is great for families and a wide variety of people, who want to walk or run.

Registration is at 11 a.m. at the town docks.

The one kilometre children's run will follow at 11:30 a.m. and be held in Head Lake Park, which is headed up by volunteer Jennifer Chapman, who is an elementary school teacher.

The five km/10 km route will start at noon and starts at the town docks, then through Head Lake Park over the bridge, past the tennis courts, on to Hwy. 118 to Museum Road into and through Glebe Park to Halbiem Crescent and back to town. It's a course that is approachable, she said. Last year, she remembers a couple of participants using walkers who were able to complete the course.

There is not an entry fee nor a minimum pledge required to participate.

Button is grateful to the community for how it has helped.

This event has garnered the support of local businesses and organizations, who have sponsored one kilometre sections of the 10 kilometre course.

> "Seeing day to day the people affected by cancer really [makes] the Terry Fox Foundation a priority."
> — Jennifer Button

She points out that 84 cents of every dollar raised will be donated to the Terry Fox Foundation for cancer research.

There has been more than $700 million raised internationally in Terry Fox's name. In Canada alone, there are more than 8,000 runs held while globally the run will be held in places such as Hong Kong, India, England, France, Bulgaria and Japan.

A few more volunteers are needed, she said. Two are needed for the halfway feed station and volunteers 18 and older are needed to assist the OPP with road marshalling.

Anyone interested in volunteering or to help the event can call Button at 705-457-0822.

Echoes from the Past & Times gone by

Step back in time with paper feature

By David Zilstra

Leafing through old issues of the Minden Times and Haliburton County Echo is a wonderful way to step back in time, and learn about the rich history of Haliburton County. The Times, which started in its current format in 1979, and the Echo about 100 years earlier in 1884, are both time capsules of the progress that shaped our past, and brought us to the present, one week at a time.

I like to grab a complete year of our archives at a time, and start reviewing the pages from January right to the end of a particular year. Reviewing each paper from the same year enables you to jump back in time, and magically recreate that year through the pages of each issue. Here we give a rare glimpse of our past by reproducing a random set of front pages of both the Echo and Times newspapers. Starting this week and running for the next ten weeks we will reproduce a historical front page of both the Echo and Times newspapers in each paper, and both pages in County Life.

The Echo and Times are proud to be the newspapers of record in our community, and we look forward to a bright future not only through the pages of our papers, but our social channels, websites and magazines like Summer Guide and Progress.

We hope you enjoy this step back in time and thank everyone for your continued support.

AND MINDEN RECORDER

Vol. 102 No. 31 Wednesday, May 2, 1984 'Voice of the Highlands' 24 pages 35 cents

Board selects director

Stuart Baker will assume top job in August

The Haliburton County Board of Education has selected a new director of Education. Stuart Baker of Haliburton was chosen from a short list of five candidates following lengthy interviews with the individuals last Wednesday.

Baker will take over the job that has been held since 1969 by J. Douglas Hodgson, who is retiring at the end of June.

The appointment of Stuart Baker capped a selection process that began last fall, when Hodgson announced his intention to step down. Some 26 people from across the province applied for the position, which is the most senior administrative job within the jurisdiction of the Haliburton County Board.

Baker is presently the principal of Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden, a position he has held since 1971, except for a one year stint as vice principal of Haliburton Highlands Senior Elementary School from September, 1979 to June, 1980. Before becoming principal of Archie Stouffer, Baker was principal/teacher at Lakeview Elementary School in Haliburton, a position he assumed in September, 1965. He began his teaching career in 1955 at Scotch Line School in Minden, moving to Lakeview School the next year.

Baker holds a teacher's certificate from Toronto Teachers College, a Bachelor of Arts Degree in economics from Waterloo Lutheran University, and a Master of Education degree in Administration from Queens University. He also holds an Elementary School Principal's Certificate and a Supervisory Officer's Certificate.

Baker will assume his duties as director of education on August 1.

Board chairman Bonnie-Lee Berry said J. Douglas Hodgson has agreed to assist Baker during a July transition period, even though the present director officially retires at the end of June.

The position of principal at Archie Stouffer Elementary School will be advertised locally, in keeping with Teachers' Federation requirements, the board chairman said.

Four individuals presently employed by the board are qualified to assume a principalship, she said.

Baker's appointment as director is for a five year term, with a review after the fourth year.

This lawn chair was about the only thing left to salvage after a lightning strike set a Koshlong Lake cottage on fire Saturday afternoon. Area property owners used portable pumps to try to quell the blaze, but their efforts were in vain. No one was injured in the incident.

Dysart et al reeve Murray Fearrey spent some time at Curry Motors Saturday morning pumping gas as part of the Thankful Tankful promotion, which raises money for the Easter Seal Society in Ontario. The reeve appeared to enjoy the job.

Ideas needed for museum

The newly formed Haliburton County Historical Society wants local councils, service clubs and individuals to come up with proposals on the best location for the Kanawa Canoe collection.

In an open letter to the public in the Letters to the Editor section of this week's Echo, Historical Society chairman Frank Wallace says the group hopes to identify the best location, then work to promote it.

Wallace says the site chosen should be centrally located for the best possible access, be of economic benefit to the greatest number of people, have a favourable environment, be low in cost, and be acceptable to the collection's owner, Kirk Wipper.

Deadline for submitting proposals is May 14, Wallace says.

On May 16, the Society hopes to make a presentation to Haliburton County Council seeking support for a site selection, and a general plan of action. As well, the group will ask for financial support to offset communication and transportation expenses.

Wallace says quick action is needed on the Kanawa question because several other areas have indicated an interest in obtaining the collection.

The Society expects to hold its next public meeting on May 24.

Wind damage widespread

Hydro crews struggle to restore service as lines break

An estimated 6000 Haliburton County residents were still without electrical power Tuesday morning as Ontario Hydro crews struggled to cope with downed lines throughout the area.

Winds of up to 100 kilometres an hour howled through the county Monday, toppling trees and causing widespread minor damage to property.

Power interruptions began in mid afternoon Monday as trees were blown down and hyrdo poles broken by the strain placed on lines.

Minden area manager Cal Wilson said crews concentrated on repairing damage to sub transmission lines first, and service was restored to many areas by 2 a.m. Tuesday. But a main line feeding Tory Hill, Wilberforce and the Gooderham area remained out Tuesday morning, leaving Hydro customers in those areas without power.

In addition, numerous rural lines were broken by falling trees, and some of these may not be repaired until at least Wednesday, Wilson indicated.

"The situation is not good" he said, noting that strong winds were still "bringing down the odd line" Tuesday morning.

Wilson said a helicopter has been called in to help locate broken lines, and additional crews have arrived from other areas to assist repair operations in the Minden district.

Wilson said conditions "were terrible" Tuesday night as crews worked to repair lines while trees continued to be blown down.

Hydro crews were expected to work until late evening Tuesday, and then continue their efforts to restore power to customers Wednesday.

Loss of electrical power was the most widespread effect of Monday's strong winds, but there was widespread minor property damage as well. Television and radio aerials were bent or broken, and falling tree limbs damaged roofs. Shingles were blown off a portion of the roof at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, and at the Gordon Neville home on the Parish line, a double garage was blown off its foundation and smashed.

Winds had moderated Tuesday, but were still gusting strongly, posing the threat of further isolated damage.

Lions come to Haliburton

Huge parade to be a highlight of weekend

At least 600 members of Lions Clubs from across south central Ontario will begin arriving in the Haliburton area Friday for a weekend convention. Area lodges are expected to be filled to capacity with Lions, their wives and families.

Gord Bennett, president of the Haliburton and District Club, which is hosting the convention, said as many as 1500 people are expected to be in the area as a result of the convention, and it is estimated that the group may spend as much as $300,000 on accommodation and other services provided by businesses in the community.

While most of the weekend's activities are for Lions Club members, the public will be treated to a huge parade on Saturday morning. Local organizers say the parade, which gets underway at 10 a.m., will be the largest ever held in the community, involving floats and other representation from at least 60 clubs, as well as up to seven marching bands and majorette groups from cities and towns within the south central Ontario district.

Wiga-Mog Inn will be the convention centre, with many activities scheduled to take place at the Haliburton Curling Club.

Lightning causes blaze

Lightning is believed to have started a fire that destroyed a cottage on Koshlong Lake Saturday afternoon.

The cottage burned to the ground despite the efforts of area residents and the Dysart et al fire department, who were called to the scene not long after the fire was discovered.

Neighbouring cottager Ed Gazensky said he saw a flash of lightning and heard a loud band as a brief but powerful thunderstorm swept over the area early Saturday afternoon. Gazensky realized that the lightning had struck somewhere nearby, but he did not know how close the strike had been until he looked out and discovered that the cottage next door, owned by John Le Menach of Gormley, was on fire.

Gazensky attempted to notify Dysart firemen , but the lightning strike had knocked out telephone service. He drove to Koshlong Marina, where telephones were still working, and turned in the alarm.

Gazensky then went to Camp Wanakita, where he and other volunteers picked up three portable fire pumps and took them to the scene of the blaze. By the time Dysart firemen arrived, Gazensky and the others had the fire under control, but the cottage could not be saved.

No damage estimate was available.

Academic Upgrading students finding success

Students who have completed Academic Upgrading (AU) at Fleming College are finding success in full-time post-secondary programs at the college.

Academic Upgrading allows students who may not have completed high school the opportunity to take courses in science, math, physics, communications and computers in order to prepare for college, an apprenticeship or career advancement.

In 2015-16, more than 110 students who completed AU courses at the college went on to take Fleming programs across six academic schools – the variety of programs range from biotechnology to urban forestry to electrical techniques. Further, those students achieved an overall average of 75 per cent or a 3.0 GPA in their first two semesters of study with close to 90 per cent of the students finishing both first and second semesters.

"What is important to note is that many of these students face significant barriers to education," says Rick Nydam, co-ordinator of Fleming College's Academic Upgrading program. "A majority of these students have been out of a school setting for some time prior to coming into the AU program. They overcome barriers that a new high school graduate doesn't necessarily have to face. These include balancing raising a family, part-time work, and paying bills – all while attending our classes."

In 2015-16, Fleming served a total of 721 Academic Upgrading students across its four campus locations in Peterborough, Lindsay, Cobourg and Haliburton. Following completion of the courses, students can opt to go on to a post-secondary program, an apprenticeship, or enter the workforce.

AU courses are free to most students via funding from Employment Ontario. At Fleming, the AU program offers a continuous intake – students can start any time – and learning is self-paced. For those who qualify, financial assistance may be available to help with transportation costs.

Finding empowerment in end of life planning

By Jenn Watt

Talking about death can be like turning a rusty wheel – it's hard work getting started, but once in motion, things get easier, says Yvonne Heath.

The longtime nurse and author of Love Your Life to Death wants to change the way we think about death and dying through open discussion and planning in advance.

Way in advance.

"The truth of it is, none of us know when we're going to die," says the mother of three. "I've done my end of life plan, so when that does happen, my family can … get to the grieving."

An end of life plan isn't just about such obvious decisions as cremation or burial, but other pieces that could ease stress for family members left behind: organ donation wishes; a list of people to be notified; dividing property; writing notes to loved ones expressing your feelings towards them.

Heath is scheduled to speak in Minden and Haliburton on Friday, Sept. 16, in two events sponsored by Haliburton Highlands Health Services.

Through her 27 years of nursing, Heath says she saw plenty of pain, suffering and death, but that not all death came with the same amount of suffering. Often, this had to do with how honest all the players were being with one another. And that's not just within the family.

Doctors and nurses can also have problems with breaking bad news to patients.

"I've been present at end of life when people are well prepared and they said, you know what? This is happening and all of my arrangements are done and now we're going to support each other," she says.

"I've been present when people are pretending it's not happening – the denial of death – and the suffering is excruciating."

Planning ahead for death means when illness or a medical emergency happens, the people involved don't need to be further burdened.

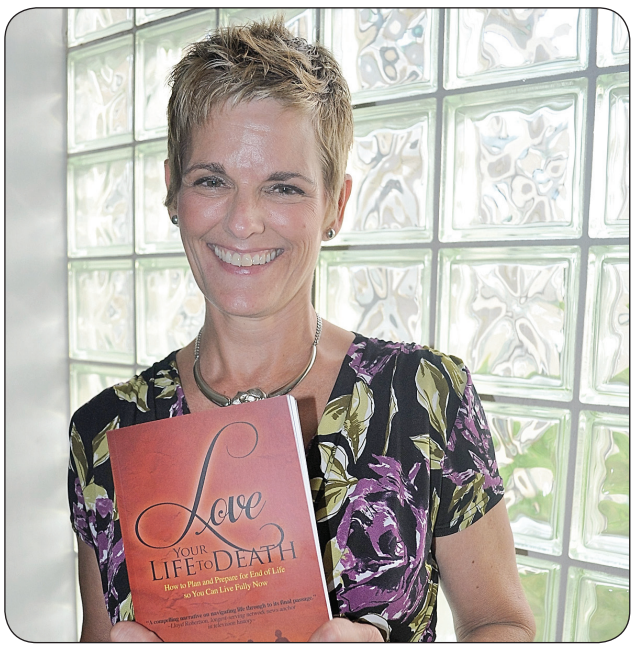
Heath worked for 13 years in chemotherapy and says when someone is facing cancer, the last thing he or she wants to do is talk about planning for death.

"The time when you get a diagnosis or you're going through chemotherapy is not the time to talk about end of life because you're already grieving and maybe you don't feel well and you're getting these treatments and you're holding on to the hope for cure. This is not the time to talk about it," she says.

For her book, published last September, the Port Sydney based author interviewed people ages 11 to 102 about experiences with grief and death. Their stories are peppered throughout the book, which offers up practical advice on planning for death and living life fully.

Thinking about death can also mean talking about what makes life worth living; regrets can be corrected, travel plans can be concocted, the best parts of life can be brought to the fore.

Our society has slowly morphed over the decades and centuries to eliminate death from the process of life, Heath writes in her book. Through the evolution of Western society, the frail elderly are more likely to live in long-term care homes, the aging and dying process removed from daily sight. Those with terminal illness



Yvonne Heath, author of Love Your Life to Death, will be coming to Minden and Haliburton for two talks on Sept. 16. Heath is a former nurse and will be speaking about how planning end of life decisions when we're healthy makes the death and grieving processes easier when it counts. ANGELICA INGRAM Staff are more likely to die in a hospital than in the home. Again, the dying process is relegated to the medical profession to take care of.

A side effect of this change is that we are less comfortable with death, Heath says, and less prepared for its arrival.

Aside from creating an end of life plan, we can also better prepare for the grieving process.

"I talk about having a post," Heath says. "Your post is that internal something you can hang onto in times of despair that's there for you no matter what."

For some, that post is faith. For others, it may be music, meditation or a personal spiritual path – "something that can create a soft landing for yourself when you're grieving," she says.

Our uneasiness with death can also mean a difficulty with comforting those who are ill, or those in the throes of grief. It's so common that the author says she sometimes gives talks titled "I don't know what to say."

When people become trapped by this fear, it can mean that they do nothing at all.

"Just show up," says Heath.

"I tell people that grief shows no mercy. It arrives unannounced, uninvited, does not care what else you're going through. It does not care if you've had enough. Also, the rest of the world doesn't stop. If you have someone at home dying, the dog still has to go out, the garbage still has to go out, you need food. The rest of life carries on. We need to learn how to show up for each other."

Heath's talk, Love Your Life to Death, is free to attend. She will be speaking Friday, Sept. 16, at 10 a.m. at Hyland Crest auditorium in Minden. The 60-minute presentation will be followed by an open discussion and book signing. For more information or reserve your seat email Brigitte Gebauer at bgebauer@hhhs.ca or call 705-457-2941.

(Heath will also be speaking in Haliburton on Sept. 16 at 2 p.m. at the Haliburton Highlands Museum. That talk is also free.)

Copies of Love Your Life to Death can be purchased from Master's Book Store in Haliburton or Organic Times in Minden or at the event. For more on Heath, her book and other resources, go to www.loveyourlife-todeath.com.

Let's talk 'BIG'

What's the BIG idea, and is it a realistic way to help fight poverty?

These and other questions are the focus of an upcoming public meeting organized by the Kawartha Lakes Food Coalition. "BIG" stands for basic income guarantee, and it's a proposal that would see the government "guarantee" all individuals or families – regardless of their work status – are given a minimum annual income. Anyone earning below this minimum annual income would receive government funding to make up the difference.

Area residents can learn more about the idea at the following free event:

What: Let's Talk BIG (basic income guarantee) Public Meeting

When: Wednesday, Sept. 21, 1 to 4 p.m.

Where: Fenelon Falls Community Centre (27 Veterans Way)

Why: Guest speaker Dr. Elaine Power, an associate professor at Queen's University in Kingston, will introduce the basic income guarantee. Dr. Power will look at the potential benefits and cautions of BIG, as well as recent developments around the idea.

Registration is appreciated, but walk-ins to the event are welcome. Free child care will be offered on site, and limited transportation to the event is also available. To find out more or to book a ride, call the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit office at 705-324-3569, ext. 2202, or email ajones@hkpr.on.ca.

One of the organizers of the event, Kimberly Leadbeater, says discussing the basic income guarantee is very timely, especially with the provincial government looking to start a pilot project in the near future to test whether a BIG idea could work in Ontario.

"We are very pleased to have Dr. Elaine Power come to the City of Kawartha Lakes to share her expertise on the topic and see how BIG could work in helping to address income inequality," says Leadbeater, who is also a registered dietitian with the HKPR District Health Unit. "There are many points of view about the benefits and costs of the basic income guarantee, and we hope to explore all sides of the issue."

"The old ways of reducing poverty aren't working," adds Mike Perry, chairman of the Kawartha Lakes Food Coalition, which is co-hosting the event. "Child poverty rates haven't gone down in more than 15 years. It's time to look at bold new approaches. This policy could end poverty for everyone, streamline our current social assistance programs and even grow the economy. Let's take a closer look!"

The Kawartha Lakes Food Coalition is a community-based collaboration. Its goal is to connect residents, organizations and stakeholders in Kawartha Lakes that have an interest in the local food system – from production… to processing and distribution… through to consumption.

Homelessness survey garners new insights into population

On Friday, Aug. 26, the Kawartha Lakes-Haliburton chapter of the 20,000 Homes campaign wrapped up a successful registry week by hosting a community update to share initial results at the Coboconk Community Centre.

Over 40 volunteers and professional staff surveyed 112 people without permanent homes to assess their housing and health care needs as part of the city's first registry week. Of those surveyed, 78 were in Lindsay, eight in the outer areas of the city and 26 in the County of Haliburton.

Survey sites included known areas with unsheltered individuals, within agencies that provide services to the homeless populations, at food banks and libraries and at special events in parks across the city and county. In addition to completing surveys, the volunteers and staff were successful in creating public awareness around homelessness.

This was a key first step in the Kawartha Lakes-Haliburton campaign to end homelessness, which is connected to the national 20,000 Homes Campaign and includes a commitment to house 24 of the most vulnerable homeless in our community by July 2018.

Some results were surprising. In addition to the overall high number of homeless in the community, were the statistics related to health care use and daily functions. For example:

- 81 people visited the emergency room 246 times in the last six months (these people visited the ER every other month, or more, on average)
- 31 people required an ambulance trip 58 times in the last six months
- 35 people reported hospitalization as an inpatient 86 times in the last six months
- 47 people (42 per cent) do not have planned activities each day that bring happiness and fulfillment other than simply surviving

"We will use the results of the campaign to prioritize actions and work with stakeholders to increase the coordination of resources for the most vulnerable in our community," comments Rod Sutherland, director of human services.

For a copy of the presentation provided at the community update and the initial results please visit the City's website: www.city.kawarthalakes.on.ca/residents/housinghelp.

Long-lost paintings of Haliburton landscapes find a home

By Angela Long

"October, Eagle Lake," dated 1963 is one of seven W. J. Hopkinson (1887-1970) paintings in the collection of art dealer Mark Skeffington. Skeffington recently launched a website dedicated to the works of the painter known for his en plein air landscapes of Ontario, particularly Haliburton County. /Mark Skeffington, Submitted

Below, Artist W.J. Hopkinson (1867-1970) selling his paintings at an outdoor art show in the `60s. Hopkinson's grandson shared photos, journals, and the family's collection of paintings with art collector Mark Skeffington. Last month, Skeffington launched a website dedicated to the artist whom he says "deserves to be better known." /Mark Skeffington, Submitted

The National Gallery of Canada Library and Archives website doesn't say much: William John Hopkinson, born in London, England 1887, immigrated to Canada 1912, died in Aurora, Ontario 1970. Painter.

Former journalist and art collector Mark Skeffington hopes to change all that. The art of W.J. Hopkinson has become his "pet project," Skeffington says in a phone interview from Brantford. Last month, he launched a website dedicated to the painter, "to ensure his beautiful art isn't forgotten."

A contemporary of several of the members of the Group of Seven, Hopkinson painted the landscapes of Ontario en plein air toting Masonite boards and oil paints across the countryside, especially the countryside of Haliburton County.

Skeffington discovered Hopkinson's art three years ago. He says he was "struck by the quality of the work," by the bold palette-knife strokes and thick layers of colour depicting the ruggedness of "the classic Canadian landscape." A blog post attracted the attention of Hopkinson's grandson Dave Forsythe who had inherited the family collection from his mother and uncle. More than 50 paintings, unframed, were stored in the basement, unseen for decades. Skeffington got out his chequebook.

Skeffington discovered more about Hopkinson through his grandson's stories, family scrapbooks and newspaper clippings, learning how the Haliburton area was the artist's favourite place to paint, especially Eagle Lake. He learned the painter was "just an average guy." Without a patron or the backing of a gallery, a luxury enjoyed by other better-known painters of his time, Hopkinson worked full time to support his family. Not until his retirement in the late '50s did the artist dedicate his life to painting, traipsing through the bush in his 70s until his death at 83.

Hopkinson sold at art fairs, to local doctors. He founded the Newmarket Art Club. He taught at the St.Croix School of Art in New Brunswick. His work was exhibited with the Royal Canadian Academy and the Ontario Society of Artists, and once appeared at the Art Gallery of Toronto.

But according to a 2011 column of This Old Thing by antiques and fine art appraiser John D. Sewell, "Hopkinson's paintings have seldom fetched more than a $1,000." However, Sewell also says, "Now that the Tom Thomsons and the A.Y. Jacksons are priced out of reach for most of us, Hopkinson's work offers an opportunity to budding art collectors."

Skeffington couldn't agree more. The month-old W.J. Hopkinson website is already attracting attention. A woman from England sent Skeffington an email: "Do you know anything about Grass Lake?" While waiting for a stoplight in a small English village, a painting in the window of a thrift store caught her eye. She purchased "Grass Lake" for five British pounds, just under $10. The photo she sent Skeffington looked familiar. He found out why just a couple of weeks ago when he and his wife rented a cottage in Haliburton County, a place they hadn't visited for 10 years. While kayaking in the vicinity of the cottage, the couple emerged onto a lake. Skeffington recognized the curve of hill, the rise of forest.

"A coincidence?" he asks.

If you own a Hopkinson painting, Skeffington would love to include a photo of the work on the W.J. Hopkinson website as part of "an online record of his hundreds of paintings." Hopkinson in the Haliburton Highlands stories are also very welcome. Please email wjhopkinson@bell.net. Check out the website at wjhopkinson.ca.

How to avoid those back-to-school asthma attacks

As the 38th week of the year approaches, hospital emergency department staff are getting ready. Long experience has taught them that they'll soon be dealing with a big influx of children and teenagers struggling to breathe.

It's known as the September Spike, the annual increase in asthma-related emergency department visits that happens just after the start of school. The main culprit is cold viruses that spread rapidly and are among the most common triggers for asthma symptoms. When children are in close contact with each other in classrooms, schoolyards and buses, the risk of infection is high. For the one in four Ontario students who live with asthma, that can mean trouble.

"The September Spike is asthma's 'perfect storm'," says Carole Madeley, director of respiratory health programs with the Ontario Lung Association. "Exposure to cold viruses, combined with the fact that many kids have changed or interrupted their regular asthma management schedule over the summer months, act as major triggers. An asthma attack can also be triggered by exposure to allergens such as ragweed, dust, mould and pet dander on other children's clothing."

Madeley says that effective asthma management requires daily effort. Parents can help to ensure that their children continue to breathe freely and easily by following these simple guidelines:

- Teach your children how to avoid an infection by washing their hands regularly. Sneeze and cough into a tissue, then throw it away. Then do the handwashing again.
- If your child doesn't already have a written Asthma Action Plan, ask your health-care provider for one so that you'll both know what to do if asthma symptoms start. Make sure the school has a copy.
- Make sure your child is taking their asthma controller medication as prescribed. Any symptoms such as coughing, wheezing, chest tightness or shortness of breath can mean asthma is not under control. The Asthma Action Plan will help you to get it back under control.
- Children should carry their fast-acting reliever inhaler with them to school. Under Ryan's Law, schools must allow children to carry their asthma medication, with the permission of a parent or guardian.
- Every member of your family should get the flu shot every year.

If you have questions about asthma or other lung health issues, call The Lung Association Lung Health Information Line at 1-888-344-LUNG (5864) or email info@on.lung.ca.
